Aims of Transforming Care

Overview

- Building the Right Support was released in Oct 2015 and is the key document that outlines the guiding principles for Transforming Care.
- It's about much more than closing beds
- Empowering people to design their own care, in the setting that suits them and in the least restrictive manner.
- Ensure care can be provided as close to home as possible, so people don't lose connections with friends and family.
- Design packages of care around people, not fit people to existing services.

Who are we supporting in Transforming Care

- Wide range of individuals;
 - All ages, but an increasing number of younger people (15-16 year olds).
 - Individuals who's had very long periods in hospital or institutional type settings.
 - People who have had a recent short hospital stay, but need a more robust package to stay stable in the community.
 - Individuals with a range of convictions or charges.
 - People with primary mental health conditions, who due to the nature of their dual diagnosis either have longer length of stay in hospital or more frequent admissions.

What is the London picture?

- As at April 2016 there were approximately 385 Transforming Care patients in hospital beds from London. Often placed in hospitals outside London.
- Approximately 200 in specialist commissioning beds with the remainder in CCG commissioned beds.
- Over the course of this year we have reduced our inpatient number by 11%.
- London has consistently discharge more patients than we have admitted since February 2016.

Transforming Care Partnerships

- In London we have six Transforming Care Partnerships:
 - North Central London
 - North West London
 - Inner North East London
 - Outer North East London
 - South West London
 - South East London

What are each of the TCPs aiming for?

- Each TCP has developed a plan for delivering their Transforming Care priorities over the three year programme.
- With initiatives ranging from;
 - Improved joint working across local areas.
 - Agreeing contracts/service specifications with providers.
 - Offering improved crisis support services.
 - Increasing the specialist skills of local teams to support this cohort.

What is the aim for London?

- By the end of 2018/19 London is aiming to reduce the hospital bed use by 35%. Brining the number of beds to 33.5 per million population.
- This will require an increase in community service to meet the need of this group outside of hospital settings.]
- TCPs are aiming to have fewer patients located outside of London, with some placements in the home counties but where ever possible not placing people further from home.

What does that mean for providers?

- Clearly there will be an impact of providers of all types as we move from the use of hospital beds for long periods, to using fewer beds for shorter length of stays.
- Increase ability to offer truly person centred services, that wrap around the individual, and may be quite different to what has been commissioned in the past.
